KINGSTON YOUTH COUNCIL

“

KYC IS THE YOUTH COUNCIL WORKING SPECIFICALLY FOR YOU IN OUR ROYAL BOROUGH. MEETING ONCE A MONTH AND HAVING REPRESENTATIVES ON MANY OTHER LOCAL COUNCILS WE ARE WORKING FAIRLY HARD. SO WHEN YOU SAY, “WELL I’VE NEVER MET THEM, WHERE ARE THEY IF THEY DO INDEED WORK FOR ME,” I UNDERSTAND, SO HERE WE HAVE DETAILS OF THE MEMBERS OF KINGSTON YOUTH COUNCIL. HOPEFULLY YOU KNOW AT LEAST ONE OF US SO YOU CAN LET US KNOW WHAT YOUR CONCERNS ARE AND WE CAN TRY AND ACT ON THEM.

Chris Fullbrook: As your voted Member of Youth Parliament I try to represent Kingston in the regional and national youth parliament. It is also my job to oversee Kingston Youth Council where possible. I think that working more in schools is the most important objective for us this year, so watch this space and hopefully your involvement will increase. Among other things I work mainly with law and order, and trying to ensure that us young people don't all get labelled for the behaviour of only a minority.

Laila Al-Ayoubi: The Deputy Member of Youth Parliament voted by you. She works to ensure there is NO bias or stereotyping in our organization. She is passionate about advertising graffiti as an art and just general expression. She would describe herself as a woman of the world and if you're on the right side of her, she is very approachable.

Natasha Patel: You may remember this name from the elections. She has stayed on and works within the council and she is heavily involved with the magazine.

Josh Taylor: Despite the fact that he is our youngest, he remains a very influential member. Again he is another law and order guy. He works to educate adults about young people and to challenge the stereotypes that are working against us as we walk down our streets.

Michael Joslin: King of all things fair trade, law and order culture, international matters and very passionate about bicycle theft. He works very heavily within his own school council, a man who can be trusted to get things done. He fights to reduce political apathy and stereotyping.

Tom White-Head Clarke: Tom is the green one amongst us. He has taken it upon himself to sweep recycling into our schools and fix your musical opinions.

Laetia Kitenge: A hip-hop dancin, chicken loving girl. She's here to bring a street side to things and she makes herself heard! So street peeps of Kingston, she's ya girl.
