

MAYOR

Politics

Vicki Exworthy and Chris Holgate

The Respect Party was created in early 2004, four months after Lindsey gained fifth place in the mayoral elections of that year. She has led a variety of anti-imperialist and anti-war movements since the seventies, most recently the Stop the War Coalition, and describes herself a socialist and a lifelong committee to women's liberation. She has lived in London most of her life, and is keen on tackling issues like racism, housing, the apartheid in South Africa and equal pay. She is running under the unofficial campaign title 'Lindsey 1st, Ken 2nd'.

PADDICK

BRIAN

A former police officer and openly homosexual, Paddick is the diverse vote and the most viable left-wing candidate to those disillusioned by Livingstone. Liberal Democrat to the core, he has produced a number of ideas such as ending the Congestion Charge and installing alternative traffic reducing measures, about which he has been slightly vague. Hoping to make London safer, he has vowed to remove knives and guns from the streets and get more police on the tube.
